

Tax Tip
Week of January 26, 2009

Capital Dividends

Private companies are allowed to accumulate certain items such as the non-taxable portion of capital gains in an account known as capital dividend account. Amounts in this account can be paid tax free to shareholders. It is important that private companies track the amounts that qualify for this account. The opportunity for a tax free payment is often overlooked in small companies.